

FLASH MEMORY WITH DATA DECOMPRESSION

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A processing system allows data downloads from a non-volatile memory to volatile memory. The non-volatile memory device includes a decompression engine to decompress the data prior to storing in the volatile memory. This built-in decompression circuit allows an increased amount of data to be stored in the flash. The compression operation is performed prior to initial storage in the flash memory.

CONTINUATION - 0832004